

A passion for productivity started the modest, electric cart company of Taylor-Dunn in 1949 and today, I am honored to share that Taylor-Dunn is celebrating 75 years of business from the very spot in Anaheim, California where it all began. This year we join the ranks of American companies that have celebrated their Diamond Anniversary, and I couldn't be more humbled by this legacy, appreciative of those who got us here and stoked for the future of this business.

Taylor-Dunn's 75 years is worthy of recognition, just as we recognize the family of employees, customers, dealers and partners that celebrate with us and deserve our appreciation. This milestone is a testament to our entrepreneurial and hardworking employees who have pioneered Taylor-Dunn electric utility vehicles, burden carriers, stock chasers and personnel carriers. We proudly share this anniversary with each of you.

Taylor-Dunn has evolved over the past seven and a half decades to become a global leader in electric industrial vehicles. While the business has endured a lot of change during its tenure, from individually owned to publicly held and back to privately owned once again, the constant has been a brand synonymous with productivity, reliability and safety.

As accomplished as the first 75 have been, the future of Taylor-Dunn is even brighter. Looking ahead, our pioneering and entrepreneurial spirit will drive Taylor-Dunn to greater heights. We are innovators in electrification, and we are committed to bringing these durable and reliable EVs to customers that are keen to the value of our productive and sustainable solutions. We continue to strengthen our global presence with strategic pursuits and growth through partnerships, reaching new markets and customers.

I'm grateful to be surrounded by such an incredible team – in the factory, in the office, and everyone out there selling, servicing and using our products everyday. The Taylor-Dunn family creates and supports some of the toughest EVs out there for demanding applications around the world, and we are just getting started.
